Nº 6. Solo with Chorus:
“I Once Knew a Chap”
Thespis and Chorus

I once knew a chap who discharged a function On the North South East West Diddly-scutt Junction. He was con - spicuous exceeding, For his affable ways, and his easy bree -d Al-though a chair-man of di-rec-tors, He was hand in glove with the tic-ket in-spec-tors. He tipped the guards with brand new fi-vers, And sang lit-tle songs to the en-gine dri-vers. 'Twas told to me with great com-

He'd mount the clerks on his first-class hunters, And he built little villas for the roadside shunters, And if any were fond of pigeon shooting, He'd ask them down to his place at Tooting.

Did-dle-sex, Did-dle-sex, lol lay.

Did-dle-sex, Did-dle-sex,

Did-dle-sex, Did-dle-sex,

In course of time there spread a rumour That he did all this from a sense of humour. So instead of signalling and stoking, they gave themselves up to a course of joking. When ever they knew that he was riding, they shunted his train on a lonely siding, or stopped all night in the middle of a tunnel, on the plea that the boiler was a coming through the wished to go to Perth or Stirling, His train through several countries whirling, Would set him down in a fit of lark-ing, At four a.m. in the wilds of Bark-ing. This pleased his whim and seemed to strike it, But the general public did not like it. The receipts fell, after a few repeatings,

And he got it hot at the annual meetings.

'Twas told to me with great compunction, By one who had discharged with

Fol did-dle, lol did-dle, shares went down to a nominal figure. These are the sad results proceeding from his affable ways and his easy breeding.

The line, with its rails and guards and peelers, was sold for a song to marine store dealers. The shareholders all are in the work'us, and he sells... pipe-lights in the Regent Circus.
